DESIGN INSPIRATION

In 18th-century Europe, Indian dyed cloths known as palampores were prized as hand-printed bed coverings and wall hangings. The inspiration for our pattern is a palampore featuring a flower-and-fruit-bearing serpentine tree emerging from a hillock with stylized peaks. Originally sourced to Sri Lanka, it was likely made for European communities in Batavia and Colombo, or for families of mixed European and Asian descent wishing to emulate Western taste.

The Metropolitan Palampore Wallpaper is digitally printed on non-woven paper. It features a large-scale repeat pattern of the original motif featuring a serpentine tree surrounded by flora. This pattern is also available in both a complementary fabric and wall mural in various colorways.
