DESIGN INSPIRATION

Perched among blossom-covered trees, the Resplendent Quetzal, also known as the "God of the Air," is celebrated for its vibrant plumage and revered as divine. Venerated by the ancient Aztecs and Maya, the quetzal symbolized goodness and light. Found as high as 200 feet above ground, it was long believed that the Resplendent Quetzal could not be bred or kept in captivity, as it often perished rather than live in confinement. For this reason, it has become a symbol of liberty and freedom. The Resplendent Quetzal's iridescent feathers display a breathtaking range of colors, from green-gold to blue-violet on its body and a red breast. Depending on the light, its feathers can shimmer in green, cobalt, lime, yellow, and ultramarine. In Mesoamerican cultures, rulers and nobility adorned headdresses with quetzal plumage.

The Resplendent Quetzal Mural is part of our Garden of Eternal Spring Collection, which features scenic florals and exotic landscapes with wallpapers and murals inspired by 18th-century tapestries and chinoiserie. Nicolette Mayer murals honor historical influences, reimagining each style with a whimsical, contemporary flair and modern color palettes. The mural's floral and aviary motifs include trees, flowers, and birds, represented with light, quick brushstrokes to create a three-dimensional effect. Available with either a solid background or ombre blending of hues that transition from light to dark, the mural offers a dynamic color gradient. The birds can also be removed for a purely floral design.
